NOTIFICATION – SERIAL KILLER CONVICTED

Dear Community Partner in Justice:

Brooklyn District Attorney Ken Thompson today announced that Salvatore Perrone, a Staten Island salesman, has been convicted of murder for the shooting deaths of three Brooklyn shopkeepers who were killed in separate incidents during 2012. The defendant, who faces a maximum sentence of 75 years to life in prison, used the same rifle in all three murders and was linked to them through matching shell casings, DNA and other forensic evidence. All three victims were killed around closing time and their bodies were covered with clothes or other items in an apparent attempt to conceal the murders.

District Attorney Thompson said, “A mountain of evidence connected this serial killer to these murders, which took the lives of three decent, honest and hard-working business owners who all left behind devastated families. Thankfully, this ruthless and cold-blooded killer will now spend the rest of his life locked behind bars and Brooklyn will be much safer because of that.”

Sincerely,

Ken Thompson
